We base our ___________ on what feels good, not what is good.

From generation to generation, we follow the same ___________ of self-destruction.

We must recognize our ______________ for this broken world.

We love to play the blame game, but eventually the sinful nature runs out of ____________.

Since the fall, creation has toiled aimlessly toward ____________, and more death comes as a result.

The people need an ____________, someone to go before God on their behalf so that He might hear their plea for mercy.

Jesus is the greater Moses, our intercessor who brings our __________ into the Father’s presence.

Sometimes, God’s deliverance comes in ____________ ways.

Jesus is God’s answer to our prayers for _____________.

Sin and death remain, for a time, but they have no power over the one who looks to ___________ and His cross.